Preamble

Dear Readers,

This guide aims to give an overview of the different types of additional scholarships and funding options relevant to doctoral students already enrolled at BerGSAS who are scholarship holders or have a part-time position. Besides a short text explaining each of the various types, we also supply you with a list for each category, which you can navigate by using Ctrl/Strg + left click on the names in the table of contents.

Please note, that you should always talk to the institution currently financing you first, in order to avoid breaking their rules, and because most of them already offer the types of funding listed here. This overview does not include funding options that are only open to students that already hold scholarships by specific institutions. At least in principle (restrictions on gender, academic performance, financial status, university, field and more apply) all options listed here, are open to everyone.

Not covered here are full doctoral scholarships (for more information you may take a look at the HU "financing your doctorate" brochure 210719financing-your-doctorate.pdf, or the various scholarship databases), PreDoc scholarships which serve to help students develop their project in the first place (e.g. PreDoc scholarships • Berliner Antike-Kolleg), and prices awarded for completed dissertation projects (though we highly recommend that you apply for those).

Disclaimer: Please note, that this list is by no means exhaustive, and that we do not guarantee for the accuracy of dates, numbers and other information listed here.

If you are aware of any changes, or know of additional institutions that provide the types of funding covered here, please let us know at regina.attula@berliner-antike-kolleg.org so we can update the guide for future generations of BerGSAS doctoral students.

We wish you every success with your doctoral dissertation and good luck with your application for additional funding!

Finalisation Scholarships ("Abschlussförderung")

The following resources might be of use to you, if your doctoral scholarship has run out, or your work contract has expired, but you have yet to finish your doctoral dissertation. There are a number of options. Please note that most of these institutions have high requirements regarding the quality of your doctoral dissertation, and the final grade of your master's degree. Often you will be required to convincingly lay out, why you were unable to complete your doctoral project in the initial time frame. Further restrictions based on e.g., gender, parental status, university, previous funding and more might apply.

Please always speak to the institution currently financing you first, to see if an extension is possible. Make sure you are well informed in good time and prepare your application well.

Disclaimer: This overview does not assert to cover all available forms of Finalisation Scholarships (Abschlussförderung), it merely aims to give an overview over the most common options. Furthermore, we cannot guarantee, that the dates and numbers listed here, are correct.

Printing Cost Subsidies "Druckkostenzuschüsse"

In Germany students are required to publish their doctoral dissertation before they can carry the academic title, e.g. "Dr. phil." Depending on the regulations ("Promotionsordnung") you may have the following options: Publication with an accredited publisher (e.g., print, print on-demand, open access), self-publication (this can be as simple as printing it in a copy shop), Publication on Microfilm, or upload to the online repository of your university. All but the last option usually come with certain costs, that can reach into the thousands depending on the number of copies required, the page count, and other factors such as colour and number of illustrations. To help you with this, many scholarships (including Finalisation Scholarships) offer financial support. At times having participated at a project or having received smaller previous grants can be enough to qualify. On the contrary all printing cost subsidies listed here, are not exclusive to holders of specific scholarships. In case the fund is limited to e-publications (open access), the money can often be used for copy editing, or proofreading fees. Almost all printing cost subsidy grants require a quote or contract by a publisher, but at the same time printing should not have started before the application is accepted.

The BerGSAS occasionally offers seminars that provided more information regarding publishing your dissertation.

Travel Grants "Reisestipendien"

As part of your dissertation project, it might be necessary for you to travel, be it to excavation sites, archives, museums or symposia, workshops and conferences. To help you cover the costs, various institutions offer travel grants, of different amounts and conditions. As with the other types of additional funding, it is always best to inform yourself about such possibilities at your current and past financing institutions first, as many of the best and most attainable grants are offered only internally.

The ones listed here are however at least in principle open to "anyone". Please note that you should always save guard the bills of all your incurred costs.

- This section has not been finalized, as with the other chapters: do your own research!
